

DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

For Circuit Judge, M. H. OVERMAN.
For County Attorney, J. H. WARREN.
For Sheriff, J. H. WARREN.
For Clerk, J. H. WARREN.

The Names are Garfield and Clark.

Our of what seemed to be darkness, confusion and a final break-up, the Republicans, after a week of hard work, have had the good fortune to bring forth a man upon whom the whole party can unite. That man is James A. Garfield, of Ohio, beyond a doubt the strongest man that they could have nominated. From the first there was a settled feeling in the Chicago Convention against Grant and a third term, but his followers stuck to him to the last, starting 394 strong and ending with 396. The Blaine faction was almost as determined, and about by its men to hold the thirty-fifth ballot, when, becoming convinced that he could in no case win, they broke for the dark horse, and with the scattering vote ran Garfield to 399 on the thirty-sixth ballot. This being twenty-three votes more than necessary to a nomination, Cookling, the leader of the Grant forces, appreciating the situation, moved that it be made unanimous. Late, a Blaine man, seconded, and the motion was carried amid the wildest excitement. Then came nomination for Vice-President: Marshall Jewell, Thomas Settle, Gov. E. J. Davis, Horace Maynard, E. B. Washburne, the colored brother, Senator Bruce, Chester A. Arthur and others, were entered. On a call of the States it was found that Arthur had received 468 votes, Washburne 193, Maynard 34, Jewell 41, and the bigger but 8. Arthur was declared the winner, and on motion his nomination was also made unanimous, and their work being ended the Convention adjourned Tuesday night en masse. The ticket is a severe deflection from the "Bosses," especially the Grant Bosses, who now wish they had let alone and refrained from bringing defeat to the man who never knew before its calling effect. Credited with having saved the country from the hands of the terrible Southern rebels, honored with two terms of the Presidency by a grateful, though misguided people, and shown around the world as the greatest living man, his friends have spared him the disgrace that will ever cling to his name for having tried to break the unwritten law of our forefathers and sought to destroy our time-honored plan of Government. Grant is dead as a marked, and having been twice defeated, Mr. Blaine is also laid on the shelf. The country can spare both of them, and let them rest in peace.

At the County Conventions held all over the State Saturday, the sentiment of the people was shown to be decidedly for the man who was elected in 1876, but who was by a lot of radical conspirators swindled out of his rights. A good number of counties instructed directly for him, while nearly all took occasion to denounce the fraud that was perpetrated on him and the people, and sent delegates that would vote for him. In Louisville 25 of the 36 delegates are for Tilden straight out, and the proportion in his favor increases the further you go into the country. More than three months ago we said that at least three-fourths of the people of Lincoln county were for Tilden, and the meeting Saturday proved the correctness of our assertion.

The Republican platform "points with pride" to the record of the party for the last twenty-one years, and declares that the only salvation to the country is to keep it in power. It denounces poligamy, declares against Chinese emigration, endorses Hayes' administration and lays particular stress on that huge joke known as his Civil Service Reform. The plank in regard to the Chinese was put in to catch the Pacific Slope; but Garfield's record on the Chinese question in Congress is too well known to pull the wool over the eyes of those people by any such pretensions.

As announced from our Bulletin Board on Friday evening last, the great suit of Green vs. Hargis was decided in favor of Hargis. The trial commenced on the 3rd of February and after months spent by lawyers in examing witnesses and in arguments pro and con, the jury took but thirty-five minutes on the 4th of June to settle the vexed matter. We are glad the case has terminated as it has, and hope that Judge Hargis is now completely cleared of the grave charges against him.

We were in error last week in stating that the bill to strike out "white" from the jury laws of the State had passed both Houses. It passed the Senate on the last working day of the session and was reported to the House but never taken up. It was, therefore, not the bill of the Clerk of the House, and we regret that a misapprehension of the facts led us to reflect on him.

We are exceedingly gratified at Mr. Warren's victory throughout the State as well as his complete triumph at home. A large number of the counties have recommended him as one of the delegates from the State at large to the National Convention, while his own ward in Louisville gave him an enthusiastic support for a delegate to the State Convention. This victory is all the more appreciated since a few enemies in Louisville declared that he should not, under any state of case, be elected. Kentucky is overwhelmingly for Tilden, and about as much so for Watterson, his faithful friend and untiring advocate.

W. D. HIRSHFIELD seconded Cookling's nomination of Grant in a peculiarly eloquent manner, but we suppose he wishes now he hadn't. His hope for a fit Government officer went with the third-term's defeat.

Democratic Mass Convention.

Pursuant to a call from the State Executive Committee, the Democratic Convention of Lincoln county, at 2 o'clock, Saturday, June 5, and were called to order by County Chairman, H. S. Withers, who explained the object of the meeting, and announced that nominations for Chairman were in order. The names of A. K. Denney, Esq., and Hon. G. A. Lackey were put in nomination, and each receiving the same number of votes the Chairman cast the deciding vote in favor of Mr. Lackey. On taking the Chair, Mr. Lackey announced that the next business was the election of a Secretary. W. H. Miller nominated T. B. Walton, Jr., of the Interior Journal, who was accordingly elected. S. S. Myers put in nomination five gentlemen as the Committee on resolutions, and W. H. Miller nominated five others. Col. T. W. Vance moved to substitute for nominating the Chairman to name the Committee, which being adopted, the following were appointed: Col. W. J. Welch, H. S. Withers, G. W. Alford, J. H. Shanks and Dr. T. H. Montgomery. A motion to refer all resolutions offered before the Convention to the Committee on resolutions, without debate, was lost. The Committee then retired, and while it was out Mr. Miller suggested that a Democratic County Committee for ensuing year be appointed. Mr. J. A. Harris moved that the old Committee be retained with power to fill vacancies, which was adopted.

The Committee on Resolutions, through Col. Welch, reported as follows:

Whereas, At a meeting of the State Democratic Convention held at Cincinnati on the 10th of March, 1880, it was requested that primary meetings be held in the various counties of our State, on the 4th day of June, 1880, to elect delegates to the State Convention to be held in Louisville on the 17th of June, which Convention elects delegates to the National Democratic Convention to be held in Cincinnati on the 22nd day of June, 1880, for the purpose of electing President and Vice-President of the United States.

NOTES OF CURRENT EVENTS.

The Emperor of Russia died this week.

President Hayes has been elected Vice President of the American Bible Society.

Already about three times as many miles of railroad have been built this year than for the same time last year. The total to June 1st is 1,519 miles.

The large wholesale drug establishment of Arthur Peter & Co., was destroyed by fire Wednesday morning. The house and stock is a complete wreck.

The Indiana Democracy have nominated Franklin Landers and Isaac P. Gray for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor. It is also instructed for Hendricks for President.

Link Blackburn is the name of the winning horse at Jerome Park in the three-quarter mile dash Thursday. He pardons all the horse that came in second—[Blowing Green Intelligence].

Gov. Blackburn will not call an extra session of the Legislature at present, but will rely on the Judges of the State to instruct Sheriffs not to incarcerate against the negro in selecting juries.

Senator Ferry got a whipping at the National Hall, Washington, this week, for making improper advances to a Miss Cooper. The father of the girl did the work, and the Senator wears a black eye as a memento of it.

Ex-Gov. Bishop, of Ohio, says that he called on John Kelley when in New York recently, and that dignitary told him that Tilden was the chiefest man and politician in the country. Bishop also says that with the exception of a pulsed left hand Tilden is as agile and hearty as any man.

The notorious Ed. Holland, of Cincinnati, was shot and wounded by Marshall Wadsworth, another gambler, on Monday night. As he was being taken home after the row he remarked, "Tilden makes thirty times that I have been shot or shot at." We hope the next will close his eventful career.

They continue to resort to the reels in Old Virginia. A week or so since W. C. Elam, editor of the Richmond Whip, published an article on the "Funders," denouncing Ex-Gov. Smith and others. Col. Thomas Smith, a son of the Governor, demanded a retraction of the article, and on being refused he challenged Elam to mortal combat. The challenge was accepted, and the affair took place an early hour on Monday. At the first blow Elam acquired a wound in the chin, which broke his jaw in two, the ball lodging under his tongue. The wound is not necessarily fatal but very severe.

We give below the ballots of the Republican Convention, omitting from the 3d to the 29th, as there was scarcely any action on those days.

One hundred and five Editors are attending the Press Convention at Ashland, and are being well, dined and honored by its citizens without limit. The annual session of the Press Convention at Ashland, the 2nd of June, was a very sad and unexpected blow to his family and the whole community. The town wears a mournful aspect for the departure of her honored and beloved citizen. He was buried on the evening of the 8th. The funeral services were conducted by Eld. Joseph Walden and Rev. Lapsley McKee, at the Christian Church. Rev. McKee's sermon was both grand and appropriate. Col. T. B. Hill, Judge Durham, Col. Landrum and James Anderson, from the bar; Wm. Kimball, John Gill, C. J. Spillman and Hon. J. H. Bruce, from the National Bank of this place, were the pall bearers. The body lay in state in front of the procession. The procession was very large and many tears were shed at the grave of this most worthy man. He was 65 years of age.

STANFORD FEMALE COLLEGE.

Another year has sped swiftly by, another prosperous season of Stanford Female

College is ended, and it is again our planing task to lay before our readers the interesting events of another uneventful year.

Before doing so, let us take a retrospective glance. During the year the average attendance of scholars has been about one hundred, the health of the establishment very good, was better than last year, and the closing exercises had no vacant chairs or seats for tears. The whole of the large family was present and joy and gladness was depicted on every countenance.

Considering the many advantages of this school, the scholarship, though good, is not near so large as it should be, but it is a matter of pride to know that each year is gaining in prestige and influence.

Since the last change of the College in 1872, Mrs. S. C. Tinsley, the worthy

Principal, has used her utmost endeavor to make it second to none in the vicinity,

and in many ways the satisfaction of knowing that her labors have been most abundantly rewarded. Our people know that they can do better than entrust their daughters to the care of this college.

and are showing their appreciation by liberally patronizing it, while parents at a distance, acquainted with its merits, gladly embrace its unequalled opportunities.

The next session, the Elementary, begins on the second Monday in September, when we hope to see the fullest school that the institution has ever enjoyed. The Commencement exercises began Sunday last with a sermon as usual addressed to the graduating class. Ed. W. A. Hillman, of Lexington, was the speaker, and while he made no attempt at display or oratory, his sermon was full of thought and practical advice to those about to enter upon the battle of life. He warned them of the enemy, not only in the front and rear, but in the side, where man's greatest enemy, li-gibility, lurks. The Court House was crowded, although the heavy clouds ever and anon

burst forth in rain during the morning, and the attention given the speaker showed that his words were as well seen as well heard.

THE ANNUAL MEETING.

On Wednesday night was attended by a full house of appreciative hearers, and was a creditable performance in every particular. The following was the excellent programme:

Secrets of Printing Office.

The extension of education which especially marked the fifteenth century in Europe had made manuscripts very valuable, and some of the earliest specimens of printing were sold as "manuscripts"—a species of extra remuneration which the printers were justly entitled to for a short time as a repayment for the special difficulties under which they labored. The processes of what was long termed the art and mystery of printing were preserved as a secret, by Gutenberg, Faust and Schoeffer, for a few years (their workmen being probably sworn and pledged to secrecy), but with no dishonorable intention, as has been inferred from the fact that the publications of 1547 contain a proud and almost boastful assertion that they were manufactured by mechanical means. Jensen was dispatched privately by the King of France to study the new art, but no greater secrecy is to be presumed from this than necessarily attends the introduction of any new and useful invention that simplifies the manufacture of any article in general demand. From time to time certain distinguished typographers have endeavored to preserve as secrets some special processes, which they consider are giving their particular advantages. Thus it is said that Baskerville would not reveal the ingredients of the ink which, to his day, was considered remarkable for its blackness, and that Barrow, of Spain, initiated his example, while Bodoni refused his most honored visitors admittance into the room of his printing office, in which, it is supposed, he adopted a peculiar method for pressing sheets. Even at the present day some trade secrets are still closely guarded, although many things are freely proclaimed.

Another species of secrecy—that of relating to the careful supervision of confidential public documents, books printed for secret societies, and the authorship of articles or pamphlets—has been most honorably maintained. When treaties are prematurely published in newspapers, the copy is obtained from some leaky or venal official, and not from any of the printers who set up or worked off the original. So, too, where it is desirable to conceal the authorship of articles or books, this is rarely or ever disclosed by a printer who becomes acquainted with it in the exercise of his calling.

Most honorable to the profession is the story of Harding, the printer, who bravely bore imprisonment rather than reveal the authorship of the Drapier Letters; and the printer sitting in his cell and calmly refusing the entreaties of his friends must stand in a far nobler light than the church ingrate and celebrated wit, who, dressed in the disguise of an Irish clown, sat by listening to the noble refusal and the tender importunities, only anxious that no word or glance from the unfortunate prisoner should reveal that beneath the rough dress of a poor peasant was hid Dean Swift himself, bent solely upon securing his own safety at the expense of the printer. Swift cowered before the legal danger which Harding boldly confronted; and, unequally as the world has allotted the need of fame to the two combatants, the wit and the printer both fought the battle for the liberty of the press, until the sense of an outraged community released the typographer from the peril so nobly encountered.

Sir Walter Scott's authorship of the Waverley novels, although known by twenty persons, including a number of printers, was so well concealed that the great novelist could not even in his private vocabulary find words of praise sufficient to express the sense of his grateful acknowledgement and wondering admiration for the matchless fidelity with which his mystery had been preserved.

In thousands of other instances similar fidelity has been exhibited, and it is a part of the professional honor of a printer not to divulge wantonly, or for venal motives, the secrets of any office in which he is employed.

An Electrical Test of Death.

Although cases of burying alive are very rare, they nevertheless happen now and again, and it is fortunate that there is a good test for the total absence of vitality in a corpse. Electricity, which is now being applied to so many useful purposes, also enables us to distinguish between life and death, because for two or three hours after the stoppage of the heart the whole of the muscles of the body have completely lost their sensibility; that is to say, when stimulated by electricity they no longer contract. If, then, an electric shock be applied to the muscles of the limbs and trunk, say five or six hours after the supposed decease, it may be certified that death has occurred for says the Medical Press and Circular, "no faint, no trace, nor coma, however deep, can prevent the manifestation of electrical muscular excitability." This is no new fact, but it has recently been brought forward again.

Alcohol Temperament and Environment.

"I am aware that there is a predisposition against any man engaged in the liquor business. I believe from the cooled and poisonous worn in the distillery, until it culminates in the hell of death, dishonor and crime, that alcohol is demoralizing to every one that touches it, from its source to where it ends. I do not believe any body can contemplate the subject without being prejudiced against the crime. All we have to do is to think of the wrecks on either side of the stream of death, of the suicides, of the insanity, of the poverty, pauperism and destruction coming from alcohol; of the little children hugging at the breast of weeping, despairing, starving mothers begging for bread, for the men of genius it has wrecked, for the men struggling with imaginary terrors produced by this devilish thing; and when we think of the jails and almshouses, of the asylums, of the prisons and workhouses on either bank, I do not wonder that every thoughtful man is prejudiced against the vile still called alcohol.

"Intemperance cuts down youth in its vigor, manhood in its strength and age in its weakness. It breaks the father's heart, bereaves the doting mother, extinguishes natural affection, destroys conjugal love, blots out filial attachments, blights paternal love and brings premature age in sorrow and dishonor to the grave. It produces weakness, not strength; sickness, not health; death not life. It makes widows, children orphans. It feeds rheumatism, nurtures gout, welcomes epidemics, invites cholera, imports pestilence, engenders consumption, and covers the land with illness, misery and crime. It produces controversy, fosters quarrels, cherishes riots. It crowds our penitentiaries with convicts and furnishes victims for the scaffold.

"Alcohol is the blood of the gambler, the inspiration of the burglar, the stimulus of the highwayman and the support of the midnight incendiary. It suggests the lie and countermands the liar, rouses the thief, tempts the blasphemous. It violates obligations, reverences friends, turns love to hate, virtue into vice and innocence into crime. It incites the father to hatching his helpless offspring, and the child to sharpen the paralytic knife.

"Alcohol burns up men, consumes women, destroys life, curses God and despoils Heaven. It suborns witnesses, nurses perjury, defiles the jury box and stains the judicial orb. It bribes voters, corrupts elections, pollutes our institutions and endangers the government. It degrades the citizen, debases the legislator, dishonors the statesman and denigrates the patriot. It brings shame, not honor; terror, not safety; despair, not hope; misery, not happiness, and with the misdeeds of a fiend calmly surveys its frightful desolation, and reveling in havoc it poisons felicity, destroys hope, ruins morals, wipes out national honor, curses the world and laughs at the ruin it has wrought. It is the sun of all villainies, the father of all crimes, the mother of all abominations, the devil's best friend and God's worst enemy."

Chromolithography.

This is an invention to obviate many of the drawbacks to chromolithography, which entails a large number of separate printings, the drying after each impression, the "registration" and many expensive stones which have to be kept idle. The new process of Mr. White, of Paris, is a method by which all the colors of a chromolithograph may be produced at one impression. The pigments of the ground color are placed in the frame as a solid block, and the design traced upon it. All the parts which do not form the ground color are then cut out, and the spaces thus left are then filled by pouring in liquid pigments corresponding to the colors or shades required to be produced. When colored the recently added color is trimmed off with a knife, and another poured in, until the whole is built up. When complete the mosaic is placed in a press and the surface shaved by a knife, so as to make it true and level, and when moistened with suitable chemicals it is ready for use. The impressions are clear, permanent and pass through the fabric. Reproductions by this process of the finest tapestries are said to have deceived dealers and connoisseurs.

What a Simple Matter.

A singular financial transaction occurred in an office a day or two since. By some means or other it happened that the office boy owed one of the clerks 15 cents, the clerk owed the cashier 10 cents, and the cashier owed the office boy 10 cents. One day last week, the office boy having a nickel in his pocket, concluded to diminish his debt, therefore handed it over to the clerk, who in turn paid half of his debt by giving it to the cashier. The latter handed it back to the boy saying that he only owed him a nickel. The boy again passed the nickel to the clerk, who passed it back to the boy, and the boy discharged his entire debt by handing it back to the clerk, thereby squaring all accounts. Thus it may be seen how great is the benefit to be derived from a single nickel. If only expended judiciously.—[N. Y. Tribune.]

Introductions.

Although it is an established rule of etiquette that persons meeting in society are at liberty to speak with one another when they know each other by sight, Americans are not very likely to do so, however familiar they may be with the rule. While it devolves on the host and hostess to introduce their guests, they cannot, of necessity, introduce more than a part of them; hence a portion of the duty must fall upon the guests themselves. The awkwardness, even the annoyance of repeatedly meeting men and women with whose faces and names you are entirely familiar, but to whom you have not been introduced, is constantly observable in social circles. The presumption that members of the same calling or of the same set always know each other is entirely unwarranted. Even should they know each other, it can do no harm, if there be any doubt in the introducer's mind, to present them. It is easy to say: "I suppose, Mrs. or Miss —, you are acquainted with Mr. —," or, "No doubt Mr. —, you have met Mr. —." If the parties have been introduced, the offered courtesy will not be superfluous or embarrassing. If they have not been, the politeness is well-timed. The absence or neglect of this attention has a tendency to create a sort of antagonism between persons usually acquainted who have met again and again without outward recognition. Each is inclined to think: "He knows me very well, but he will not speak. If he feels so, I am sure I will not be the one to speak first." We have known persons of prominence, men particularly, to encounter one another at parties and receptions through a whole season without an introduction. Having many friends in common, and being constantly thrown together, the mistake is naturally made that they are acquainted.

Another bit of etiquette equally well defined is that of a lady, after a gentleman has been introduced to her, should, on another meeting, recognize him first, it being her prerogative to drop the acquaintance if she sees fit. This bit of etiquette, however, is apt to be ignored, women instinctively falling into the habit of waiting for men to make the initiative in recognition, as in everything else. Women frequently complain of the discourtesy of men in this matter, when the latter are merely observing the form of courtesy which etiquette has ordained.

Just Hitting on the Nerve.

It is a well known fact that married men, if you have a fair show. Don't stand shivering on the bank, but pitch right in and stick your head under and shiver it out. That ain't any more trick in getting married than there is in eating peanuts. Many a man has stood shivering on the shore until the river has run out. Don't expect to marry an angel, they have all been picked up long ago. Remember, young man, you ain't a saint yourself. Do not marry for beauty exclusively; beauty is like ice, awfully slippery and thus dangerously false. Don't marry for love, neither; love is like a cooking-stove, good for nothing when the fuel gives out. But let the mixture be some beauty, becomingly dressed, with about $25,000 in her pocket, a good speller, handy and neat in her house, plenty of good sense, tall constitution and in-laws, small feet, a light step, add to this sound teeth and a warm heart. The mixture will keep in any climate and will not evaporate. Don't marry for pedigree unless its backed by bank notes. A family with nothing but pedigree generally lacks sense.

The proportions of the human figure are six times the length of the feet. Whether the form is slender or plump, the rule holds good; and deviation from it is a departure from the highest beauty in proportion. The Greeks made all their statues according to this rule. The face, from the highest point of the forehead, where the hair begins, to the chin, is one-tenth of the whole stature. The hand, from the wrist to the middle finger, is the same. From the top of the chest to the highest point of the forehead is a seventh. If the face, from the nose of the hair to the chin, be divided into three equal parts, the first division determines the space where the eyebrows meet, and the second the place of the nostrils. The height, from the feet to the top of the head, is the distance from the extremity of the fingers when the arms are extended.

SWINDLING.

A young man of our county, in answer to an advertisement of the "Chicago Miniature Piano Company," outlined the required sum for an agent's outfit an ample machine and received the following reply: "To make instrument—Take one Harlow knife and two corn stalks, add six cents to make what was known fifty years ago as a corn stalk fiddle, now known as the miniature piano. To tune the instrument—Take a family of cats, tie them across an empty flour barrel, then sit down and pinch their tails. Most anybody can do this."—[Lexington Press.]

Still Life of Young Men.

One night often destroys a whole life. The leakage of the night keeps the day forever empty. More sin and crime are committed in one night than in all the days of the week. This is more emphatically true of the city than of the country. The street lamps, like a file of soldiers, with a torch in hand, stretch away in long lines on either sidewalk; the gay-colored transparencies are ablaze with attractions; the saloon and billiard halls are brilliantly illuminated; music sends forth its enchantment; the gay company begin to gather to the haunts and houses of pleasure; the gaudy dens are aflame with palatial splendor; the theaters are wide open; the mills of destruction are grinding health, honor, happiness, hope out of thousands of lives. The city under gaslight is not the same as under moonlight. The allurements and perils and pitfalls of night are a hundred fold deeper and darker and more destructive. Night life in our cities is a dark problem, whose depth and wholeness and whirlpools make us start back with horror. All night long tears are falling, blood is streaming.

Young men, tell me how and where you spend your evenings, and I will write out the chart of your character and final destiny, with blanks to insert your names. It seems to me an appropriate text would be, "Watchman, what of the night?" Policemen, pacing their beat, what of the night? What are the young men of the city doing at night? Where do they spend their evenings? Who are their associates? What are their habits? Where do they go in, and what time do you see them come out? Policemen, would the night life of young men commend them to the confidence of their employers? Would it be to their credit.

Make a record of the nights of one week. Put in the morning paper the names of the young men, their habits and haunts, that are on the street for sinful pleasure. Would there not be shame and confusion? Some would not dare go to their places of business; some would not return home at night; some would leave the city; some would commit suicide. Remember, young men, that in the retina of the all-seeing Eye there is nothing hid but shall be revealed on the last day.—[Christian Standard.]
